Dan Wu has been an outspoken supporter of immigrants and refugees in Lexington. Several years ago, he produced a short film titled "I Am a Kentuckian", which he premiered at an event celebrating immigrants and refugees and raising funds for KEJC and Kentucky Refugee Ministries. He later reached out to us with further fundraising and public awareness campaign ideas, including the "Immigrants and Refugees Welcome Here" signs, which he proposed to include KEJC's information and to distribute to local businesses as a sign that they were welcoming to immigrants and refugees. When we discovered a funding opportunity to create the posters, Dan volunteered his time to help us get the grant and distribute the posters. Dan has been an advocate in the community in a time when many immigrants face uncertainty and oppression. He has been a persistent supporter of KEJC and our role helping immigrants. He participates in public discourse, sponsoring and speaking at "On Common Ground" last September, in 2019. Lexington Community Radio (now RADIOLEX) hosted "On Common Ground" a public conversation about immigration, identity, and how we define community. Dan also recently participated as a speaker in the Unemployment Insurance Town Hall that KEJC hosted, sharing his perspective as a local business owner.
