Job Title: Librarian Assistant

Employer: Lexington Public Library

Recommendation: Please tell us why you think the nominee would make a good Board member. Feel free to describe the nominee's personal commitment and experience relevant to the mission (you may attach a statement):

It is with great pleasure that I nominate Ms. Jackie Arakaki to the KEJC board. Ms. Arakaki has shown exemplary community involvement by helping the underserved and underinsured. Over the years, Ms. Arakaki has demonstrated a commitment to the Lexington community through the Promotoras program, research, and community outreach programs.

Ms. Arakaki has also committed herself to work in the Latinx community where there is a lack of providers and disadvantaged people need health/social care. Ms. Arakaki served as the president of the Board of FLACA (Foundation of Latin@ American Culture & Arts) and is presently serving as chair of the Arts and culture committee, she is an integral part of putting the Festival Latino of Lexington for many years.
Ms. Arakaki accomplishments involve many presentations, teaching Spanish as a second language, working with HIV programs, working with children with special needs and grants in the public health area, and she says she sees these achievements as "just a part of what I do."

The many lives touched through her work in Fayette County is remarkable. Ms. Jackie Arakaki is a candidate I strongly nominate for the board.

Recommendation: Please tell us why you think the nominee would make a good Board member. Feel free to describe the nominee's personal commitment and experience relevant to the mission (you may attach a statement):

I have known Allison for about six years. I met her when she was completing her college coursework at Murray State University and working part time. At that time, she was diligently involved in student advocacy and organizing through the Murray Environmental Student Society. Since graduation, she has worked as a reporter and producer for a National Public Radio station and as Communications and Development Director for Kentucky Student Environmental Coalition, an organization that she has remained committed too since she graduated college in 2014. She cares deeply about social justice and does what she can to support social justice initiatives in Kentucky through her work and through being a member of and involved in Kentuckians for the Commonwealth. When I have needed to refer a reporter to a client for commentary on the state of health insurance benefits in Kentucky, she has always made herself available. As a board member, Allison will be dedicated to serving KEJC and its mission.

I only met Amanda recently by telephone. She called me as part of a survey of rural folks in Kentucky who might be knowledgeable about the need for transactional lawyers in the non-profit world in Kentucky. She has recently returned to Kentucky with her two young children from Massachusetts where most of her experience was with the Transactional Law Clinics at Harvard Law School. She had gotten a grant from the The Kentucky Science and Technology Corp. (Chris Kimmel’s group—he is gone and the group is on a downward path) to do the survey. I will attach her lengthy Resume. I think she would give an interesting perspective to the Board with her expertise in assisting with the development of non-profits for low income clients, and related work, including grants and fundraising. I emailed her afterwards to ask her if she would be interested in serving on our Board and she was very enthused about serving.

Legal Issues for Entrepreneurs, Small Businesses, and Non-Profit Organizations

Other

DIRECTED PROJECTS, PRESENTATIONS, AND PUBLICATIONS

PUBLIC BENEFITS AND MICROENTERPRISE PROJECT
Spring 2017

- A team of two clinical students worked on a cross-clinical collaboration with the Disability Litigation and Public Benefits clinic and other community partners to research and draft resources and prepare and deliver workshops for public benefits recipients who aim to launch or run existing microenterprises without unintentionally running afoul of any public benefits they receive.

SPARE CHANGE NEWS PROJECT
Spring 2017

- A team of two clinical students partnered with the Homeless Empowerment Project, a grassroots organization that publishes Spare Change News, to provide information to Spare Change News vendors about the legal issues inherent in running a microenterprise, how to run their microenterprises without running afoul of their public benefits, how and where they can vend the papers in Cambridge and neighboring municipalities, and connect the vendors to other legal services providers to address any non-business-related legal issues they may face.
Ujima Project
Spring 2016
- A team of three clinical students worked with a group of community activists and leaders to identify, research, and strategize solutions to legal issues implicated by the group’s comprehensive, multi-faceted plan to seize local control of the economy of a defined geographic neighborhood, which included implementation of multi-layered cooperatives, a good business certification program, and localized investment platforms.

Worker Cooperative Project
Fall 2015 - Spring 2016
- A team of three clinical students partnered with local organizations that support cooperative development to research and draft a resource for worker cooperatives and the lawyers and other technical assistance providers who work with them. The resulting publication, Tackling the Law, Together: A Legal Guide to Worker Cooperatives Generally and in Massachusetts, was utilized in a subsequent semester by a new team of three students who presented the material in a series of workshops for existing worker cooperatives in Greater Boston as well as those individuals interested in forming a worker cooperative. Each workshop was followed by one-on-one consultation appointments in which attendees could discuss their specific legal questions with clinical students accompanied by practicing attorneys.

Fairmount Innovation Lab Project
- A team of four clinical students prepared and presented a series of workshops at a local business incubator on legal issues pertinent to entrepreneurs in the creative economy, including issues related to entity formation, contract review, intellectual property, and licensing and permitting. Each workshop was followed by one-on-one consultation appointments in which attendees could discuss their specific legal questions with clinical students accompanied by practicing attorneys.

Immigrant Entrepreneurs Project
Spring 2015
- A team of three clinical students worked with a local network of immigrant organizations as well as a broad network of national experts to draft a resource for Massachusetts immigrant entrepreneurs and the lawyers and other technical assistance providers who work with them, titled A Legal Guide to Business Ownership by Immigrant Entrepreneurs in Massachusetts. The resource was later translated into Spanish and is now being used as a model for other state-specific resources across the country. I am now engaged in ongoing consulting for law school clinics and other legal services providers across the country regarding the development of additional state-specific resources as well as the feasibility of a national platform to house such resources.

JOBS Act Crowdfunding Project
Spring 2015
- A team of three clinical students partnered with a community organization, Jamaica Plain New Economy Transition, to untangle the practical and legal hurdles that communities who aimed to facilitate localized equity investment in neighborhood businesses would face under the crowdfunding provisions of the Jumpstart Our Business Startups (JOBS) Act.

Veteran Entrepreneurs Project
Fall 2014 - Spring 2015
- Six clinical students, organized into two teams of three clinical students across two semesters, worked in partnership with the Veterans Legal Clinic at Harvard Law School to expand the reach of the cross-clinical initiative, known as the Veterans Enterprise Initiative, by networking with regional veterans organizations to coordinate existing technical assistance resources for veterans entrepreneurs. The students also prepared and delivered a series of interactive presentations on legal issues for veteran entrepreneurs for individuals enrolled in technology training courses offered by Tech Goes Home.

CONDO PROJECT
Spring 2014

- A team of three clinical students worked with the City of Boston’s Department of Neighborhood Development as well as a network of local affordable housing organizations to draft a resource for condominium owners, particularly those belonging to small condominium associations, titled Healthy Condominium Toolkit: Tips for Maintaining a Strong Condominium Association. Students also presented the information contained in the toolkit at a first-time homebuyers course sponsored by the City of Boston.

MAIN STREETS PROJECT
Spring 2014

- A team of three clinical students collaborated with the City of Boston’s Main Streets Program to develop and present a training session on particular issues of good governance to the executive directors of each of the city’s 22 individual Main Streets organizations, including discussions regarding conflicts of interest, political campaigning and lobbying, and liability and risk management.

259Q PROJECT
Spring 2014

- A team of three clinical students partnered with a local community development corporation to identify and research legal issues implicated by preliminary plans to convert vacant warehouse owned by the organization into a community-led fabrication lab and technical training facility.

FOOD TRUCK PROJECT
Spring 2013 – Spring 2014

- Six clinical students, organized into two teams of three clinical students across two semesters, worked in partnership with the Harvard Food Law & Policy Clinic and in collaboration with the City of Boston’s Mayor’s Office of Food Initiatives and a number of local organizations to research and draft a resource for food trucks and those organizations that work with them. This resource, Food Truck Legal Toolkit for the City of Boston, was updated in subsequent semesters and has been presented numerous times at the City of Boston’s Food Truck 101 training sessions.

MASS IN MOTION PROJECT
Spring 2013

- Two clinical students, across two semesters, worked in partnership with the Center for Health Law & Policy Innovation at Harvard Law School on the Massachusetts Joint Use Project, an initiative by the Center for Health Law & Policy Innovation together with the Harvard School of Public Health and the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. The students assisted with preparation of The Massachusetts Joint Use Toolkit: Helping Kids and Communities Be Healthy and Active, which serves as a how-to guide for community members seeking to access public buildings and spaces afterhours so residents can exercise and engage in other recreational activities.

Spring 2016
• A team of three clinical students worked with a group of community activists and leaders to identify, research, and strategize solutions to legal issues implicated by the group’s comprehensive, multi-faceted plan to seize local control of the economy of a defined geographic neighborhood, which included implementation of multi-layered cooperatives, a good business certification program, and localized investment platforms.

WORKER COOPERATIVE PROJECT
Fall 2015 - Spring 2016
• A team of three clinical students partnered with local organizations that support cooperative development to research and draft a resource for worker cooperatives and the lawyers and other technical assistance providers who work with them. The resulting publication, Tackling the Law, Together: A Legal Guide to Worker Cooperatives Generally and in Massachusetts, was utilized in a subsequent semester by a new team of three students who presented the material in a series of workshops for existing worker cooperatives in Greater Boston as well as those individuals interested in forming a worker cooperative. Each workshop was followed by one-on-one consultation appointments in which attendees could discuss their specific legal questions with clinical students accompanied by practicing attorneys.

Fall 2015
• A team of four clinical students prepared and presented a series of workshops at a local business incubator on legal issues pertinent to entrepreneurs in the creative economy, including issues related to entity formation, contract review, intellectual property, and licensing and permitting. Each workshop was followed by one-on-one consultation appointments in which attendees could discuss their specific legal questions with clinical students accompanied by practicing attorneys.

IMMIGRANT ENTREPRENEURS PROJECT
Spring 2015
• A team of three clinical students worked with a local network of immigrant organizations as well as a broad network of national experts to draft a resource for Massachusetts immigrant entrepreneurs and the lawyers and other technical assistance providers who work with them, titled A Legal Guide to Business Ownership by Immigrant Entrepreneurs in Massachusetts. The resource was later translated into Spanish and is now being used as a model for other state-specific resources across the country. I am now engaged in ongoing consulting for law school clinics and other legal services providers across the country regarding the development of additional state-specific resources as well as the feasibility of a national platform to house such resources.

JOBS ACT CROWDFUNDING PROJECT
Spring 2015
• A team of three clinical students partnered with a community organization, Jamaica Plain New Economy Transition, to untangle the practical and legal hurdles that communities who aimed to facilitate localized equity investment in neighborhood businesses would face under the crowdfunding provisions of the Jumpstart Our Business Startups (JOBS) Act.

VETERAN ENTREPRENEURS PROJECT
Fall 2014 - Spring 2015
• Six clinical students, organized into two teams of three clinical students across two semesters, worked in partnership with the Veterans Legal Clinic at Harvard Law School to expand the reach... of the cross-clinical initiative, known as the Veterans Enterprise Initiative, by networking with regional veterans organizations to coordinate existing technical assistance resources for veterans entrepreneurs. The students also prepared and delivered a series of interactive presentations on legal issues for veteran entrepreneurs for individuals enrolled in technology training courses offered by Tech Goes Home.

CONDO PROJECT
Spring 2014
- A team of three clinical students worked with the City of Boston’s Department of Neighborhood Development as well as a network of local affordable housing organizations to draft a resource for condominium owners, particularly those belonging to small condominium associations, titled Healthy Condominium Toolkit: Tips for Maintaining a Strong Condominium Association. Students also presented the information contained in the toolkit at a first-time homebuyers course sponsored by the City of Boston.

MAIN STREETS PROJECT
Spring 2014
- A team of three clinical students collaborated with the City of Boston’s Main Streets Program to develop and present a training session on particular issues of good governance to the executive directors of each of the city’s 22 individual Main Streets organizations, including discussions regarding conflicts of interest, political campaigning and lobbying, and liability and risk management.

259Q PROJECT
Spring 2014
- A team of three clinical students partnered with a local community development corporation to identify and research legal issues implicated by preliminary plans to convert vacant warehouse owned by the organization into a community-led fabrication lab and technical training facility.

FOOD TRUCK PROJECT
Spring 2013 – Spring 2014
- Six clinical students, organized into two teams of three clinical students across two semesters, worked in partnership with the Harvard Food Law & Policy Clinic and in collaboration with the City of Boston’s Mayor’s Office of Food Initiatives and a number of local organizations to research and draft a resource for food trucks and those organizations that work with them. This resource, Food Truck Legal Toolkit for the City of Boston, was updated in subsequent semesters and has been presented numerous times at the City of Boston’s Food Truck 101 training sessions.

MASS IN MOTION PROJECT
Spring 2013
- Two clinical students, across two semesters, worked in partnership with the Center for Health Law & Policy Innovation at Harvard Law School on the Massachusetts Joint Use Project, an initiative by the Center for Health Law & Policy Innovation together with the Harvard School of Public Health and the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. The students assisted with preparation of The Massachusetts Joint Use Toolkit: Helping Kids and Communities Be Healthy and Active, which serves as a how-to guide for community members seeking to access public buildings and spaces afterhours so residents can exercise and engage in other recreational activities.
